Father DARKLEAF'S Column

BY CH.R.

Paw-don the interruption, please. But may an outsider offer some inside suggestions? About Spring.

Your yard and your garden. It's time now to get around it that planning you vaguely thought of all winter. Yes, "Let's see, before you do any thing towards painting or adding new things, first, let's get the lawn in shape."

Each week seems to add new to the contest for the Democratic nomination for the governorship of Virginia.

To date the following candidates are officially in the field: George C. Peery, W. Worth Smith, Jr., Joseph T. Deal and T. Ralph Jones.

Dark horses now reported to be pondering tossing their hats into the melee are: Coleman Andrews and state senator Layman Andrews.

When we sit down and read an article on Appomattox history and the events of April, 1865, we really do feel like a chronicler—or sum—tin'. But when we find out that the articles are used for practical purposes, we bubble over with importance.

Two weeks ago, for example, we carried on the front page an article on the surrender here in 1865. It was the sixtieth anniversary. Now, we have just learned that that article was really useful. Out in Indiana, too.

Mrs. Nellie M. Wagers, of Elkhart, Ind., takes this paper. The family reads it. One of the children took the article about Appomattox to school and showed it to "teacher."

The result was the whole article was read to the class and studied. Just another example of "There's nothing like a 'Home Paper'."

THINGAMBOYS—Stanley Baldwin was a recruiting officer in the army. "pretentious apple blossoms I've seen at date and senator Pennington Brick House farm, why drive to Washington to see cherry blossoms?"

Beer or no prescription in the picture that, willa... but we pay 28 cents a bottle for beer that is generally a disappointment when I am informed you can make 5¢ home-brew for one and a half cents a bottle?

...it's all a bad way for a rainy day when you are one of the gas companies painting its pumps red, white and blue this week.

W. A. Drinkard says he had to explain why Father Darkleaf was... some even call me "Greenleaf" and Darkleaf and uncle... but it's just plain me.

Customer: "What have you in the shape of automobiles?" Clerk: "Life-savers, funeral wreaths, life preservers and doughnuts."

Yeah, and there's the fellow who asked for a glass of water after getting shaved by the new barber. He wanted to see if his throat leaked.

About the only thing that can sit still now a days and get results is a hen.
